Peace Corps Plan Hit

President-elect John F. Kennedy's plan to send young Americans overseas with plows instead of rifles has run into some skepticism.

The Rev. James Robinson, speaking yesterday at a conference on how best to get the peace corps into operation, said even small-scale, non-government efforts overseas are often viewed with suspicion.

"They say we are too innocent looking to be innocent," he said, "and want to know just what branch of the CIA (Central Intelligence Agency) we represent."

Rev. Robinson represented a volunteer group called Cross Roads Africa. (UPI)
